A men's soccer team at the University of Maryland is getting bad press for refusing to play a game in which a referee, who is a Muslim, wears a Muslim head covering. Maryland is not the only university playing what is called "Islamic head dress soccer." The Arizona State University men's soccer team also refuses to play the game, but at least the rest of the Arizona State men's soccer team supports the idea. ALSO SEE: Maryland's men's soccer team: 'We refuse to accommodate that' "The goal, of course, is to change the culture and the mindsets and the laws, and I think that's a great thing to try to do," said Arizona State University men's soccer coach Bobby Hauck. "There are rules that apply to all of them, all of them are equal. There's nothing different." However, the head coach of the University of Maryland men's soccer team is making headlines. "We're sticking to our guns on this," head coach Sasho Cirovski said. "We're not going to play a game where people are getting on their sport and wearing hijabs. We just think it's very inconsistent with our brand and our university and what we stand for, to play a game where people are getting on their sport and wearing hijabs." Cirovski says even though it's a first for his program, this isn't an issue he hasn't considered. "They'll go through the proper channels just like the rest of us have to go through to get in the game," he said. He says however that this just isn't an issue that will win. "We've decided to be an inclusive team as well," he said. The University of Maryland men's soccer team is scheduled to face the Arizona State University men's soccer team on February 10. What's New in the?

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a piezoelectric microswitch, and particularly to a piezoelectric microswitch which can be also used as an actuator. 2. Description of the Related Art There are so many needs to miniaturize and speed up electronic devices, and there are also many micro components to meet the needs. A conventional switch device is mostly actuated by a mechanical structure, e.g., a piece of elastic material is pulled or pushed to actuate a contact, and is actuated by mechanical force. A conventional micro switch is actuated by surface wave, thereby the micro switch is actuated by using a thin film piezoelectric material. A piezoelectric material is a kind of piezoelectric ceramics, which changes in shape when a voltage is applied. Conventionally, a piezoelectric ceramic disc is used for a micro switch. One side of the piezoelectric ceramic disc is secured to a circuit board, and the other side is secured to a metal rod. When a voltage is applied to the piezoelectric ceramic disc, a metal rod is pulled, thereby deforming the ceramic disc and the metal rod together. The metal rod returns to its original shape when the voltage is removed, and the ceramic disc returns to its original shape, while pushing the metal rod. A micro switch is actuated by the metal rod of the ceramic disc. In this way, the micro switch is actuated by a piezoelectric ceramic disc. However, the ceramic disc is easily damaged, and does not easily return to its original shape. In addition, the ceramic disc has bad heat dissipation and is hard to weld onto a circuit board, thereby the ceramic disc is very difficult to be assembled. Further, the ceramic disc is hard to be deposited, thereby the ceramic disc is not easy to be thinned to a minimum thickness, and the ceramic disc is very difficult to be combined to other electronic components. Q: The loss pattern of the answer is not right This is an example from the book: Let θ be a parameter to be estimated in the MLE given by (3). For each point (x_i, y_i) , we have the likelihood $p(x_i, y_i | \theta)$ propto $\exp \Big \{ \sum_{i=1}^n \log p(x_i, y_i | \theta) \Big \}$
